

Part B Insider (Multispecialty) Coding Alert

Physician Notes: Use Social Media for Emergency Updates with Care

Does social media benefit your ED team? ASPR-TRACIE wants to hear about it.

New guidance from the feds suggest social media can be a valuable and essential resource for communication during and after man-made and natural disasters.

The HHS Office of the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response's Technical Resources, Assistance Center, and Information Exchange (ASPR-TRACIE) has compiled numerous resources to address the use of social media for emergency response. The department offers advice on what has worked for emergency personnel nationwide - and what has not. ASPR-TRACIE is also asking providers, healthcare workers, and emergency responders to share positive experiences from their departments.

Resource: To look at the HHS-ASPR guidance or to share your experiences, visit <https://asprtracie.hhs.gov/technical-resources/73/social-media-in-emncy-response/60>.