Mark your calendars for "Dementia 101: Dispelling The Myths Of Alzheimer's Disease," a live audioconference on May 29, 2007 from 1-2 EST.

Featured speaker: Susan Gilster, RN, PhD, who was responsible for the development of the Alois Alzheimer Center, which opened in 1987 as the first free-standing dementia facility. Diagnosing early, and learning to understand the disease, has never been more important. While there is no cure today for Alzheimer's disease, there are some surprising new techniques available that can improve quality of life. And research is underway for those awaiting a cure.
